International Anthology of English Poems

Editor

Seena Sreevalson

Seena Sreevalson is a poet, translator and editor from Kerala, India. She writes poetry in English and Malayalam. Her major themes include feminine sensibilities, nature, ecological issues and social issues. She has presented her poems in several national and international poetry festivals. Her poems have also been featured in many international poetry anthologies. She is a teacher by profession and also a classical dancer who experiments in visual aspects of poetry.

The power of words and poetic representation is on display here in an exemplary way. These minds who have rendered soul stirring poems to this anthology have indeed transcended all borders and crafted an artifact of admirable quality.

BLEEDING SYRIA

*M*en, women and children
 Of all ages in million
 Scotched from the earth
 Equally set for all being to live
 Freely in this wonderful sphere....

Half burned and half drowned
 In blood and bones out!
 Sight and speech turned
 Senseless for the new born
 And the venerable alike....

Zealatory , religious and political
 Lead to massacre terrible
 Turning every human
 More avarice than
 Vicious animal actions!

Oh! Save BLEEDING Syria
 From the hands of the
 Soulless, barbarous brains
 Who turn even the souls
 Lifeless to be born-again....
